Commentary and Statistics

- After an upbeat week, major equity indexes posted marginal losses following a down day on Friday as investors grappled with the pressing question of when the next Federal Reserve (Fed) rate hike will be. The S&P 500 and Dow Jones Industrial Average both experienced a slight loss for the period. International stocks also took a hit with the STOXX Europe 600 trailing the U.S. equity indexes. The yield on the U.S. 10-year Treasury note closed on Friday at approximately 1.58%. Oil prices advanced significantly while gold was relatively flat.
- The release of the July Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) minutes reiterated the Fed's position that, prior to the next hike, economic data must confidently imply that the economy can withstand the potential implications of a rate increase.
- The U.S. housing market expressed mixed signals during the week. The National Association of Home Builders trade group measured a two-point rise in home builder confidence from 58 to 60 comparing July to August. However, a 0.1% decline in building permits in June, compared to economists' forecast of a 0.6% gain, echoes the unpredictability of home sales and construction.
- U.S. industrial production advanced 0.7% in July, the largest advancement since November 2014.
- During June, euro zone exports fell by 2.2%, imports were down 5%.
- Markit's U.K. Household Finance Index (HFI) which measures insights about household spending was 44.9 in August (up from 44.3 in July) implying a continuing recovery of financial perceptions in the U.K. While the score is still below the threshold of 50.0, it is the highest in four months.

- ² Metrics presented use pre-determined criteria to measure each individual investment product based on its ability to either a) rank above the median of its peer category; or b) outperform its benchmark index on a gross-of-fees basis. Generally speaking, the results for unconstrained, fully-active investment products were based on relevant peer category rankings while those of "enhanced index", rules-based, risk-constrained, or client-specific investment products were based on benchmark-relative performance. Metrics are calculated on an annualized basis and includes mutual funds as well as pooled and separately-managed institutional portfolios that fall within our traditional (long-only) commercial book of business that remain open as of 06/30/16. If terminated and other accounts had been included, results may have differed from that shown. Source of performance returns and peer medians is Voya Investment Management but is based in part on data from Morningstar® (mutual funds) and eVestment (institutional composites). Further detailed information regarding these calculations is available upon request.
